

STATEMENT

Barbara Levy Jan. 1979

The things in my environment present themselves to me. I see them. Their function is forgotten. Without it they become inert, enlarged, unreal.

My photographs are the result of an attempt to purge things of their inertia. The photograph becomes a metaphor for the management of it.