* Hunter Reynolds: 'Patina du Prey's Memorial Dress, 1993-2007' In 1993 Hunter Reynolds -- an artist and an H.I.V.-positive gay man -- first performed as his alter ego, Patina du Prey, wearing a black ball gown inscribed with thousands of names of people who had died of AIDS. There were so many names that a second gown had to be made. It is in this heartbreaking show, along with the memorial books of names collected over the years, and blank books for recording names for a new dress. In a world littered with bogus monuments, this is the real, worthy thing. Artists Space, 38 Greene Street, third floor, SoHo, (212) 226-3970, artistspace.org; closes tomorrow. (Cotter)
