Urban Pornography

Urban Pornography examines the contemporary staging of the urban condition photographically. The recording of banal structures and spaces range in approach from cynical to nostalgic, recovering obscure, in-between sites – domestic facades, billboards, casino and cruise interiors, in a process of sensationalizing an abjected ordinary. In revealing the prosaic and spectacularizing the banal, the images of global metropoli represented by this group of artists serve to critique the perversion of repetition, sameness, predictability, and excess of “the city.”

Doug Aitken, Jordi Bernado, Oliver Boberg, Laura Carton, Lourdes Grobet, Hong Hao, Naoya Hatakeyama, Todd Hido, Francesco Jodice, William Jones, doreen morrissey, Jean-Luc Moulène, Warren Neidich, Catherine Opie, Bill Owens, Lisa Roy, Ed Ruscha, Alex Slade

Featuring project room installations by Jonah Freeman and Michael Phelan.

Urban Pornography is made possible, in part, by contributions from the Cultural Services of the French Embassy (www.frenchculture.org), Riva Gallery, Natalie Angles, and Stephen Wirtz Gallery.

Selected by Ali Subotnick

In his first New York installation, Daniel Roth's photographs, drawings on vellum, and videos of his birthplace, Germany's Black Forest, examine the unpredictable relationships between man, nature, and architecture, both real and imaginary.
